Profiles of Host Sites:

Alfred University:

(Tuesday, October 23, noon – 2:00 pm)

Last year 26% of Alfred's graduating seniors went on to graduate or professional school within one year of graduation. With over 50 undergraduate major concentrations in the Liberal Arts and Sciences, Engineering, Art and Design and Business, and as home to the New York State College of Ceramics, Alfred is unique in its atmosphere and diversity. The majority of students planning to attend graduate school apply to programs in education, human services, medicine, law, art & design, business, sciences, liberal arts, and engineering.

(See www.alfred.edu/cdc/)

SUNY College at Geneseo:

(Tuesday, October 23, 5:00 – 7:00 pm)

Nearly 40% of SUNY Geneseo's recent class of twelve hundred graduating seniors chose to enroll full-time in graduate/professional schools the fall semester following their commencement. Most (two-thirds) selected Masters programs in education and speech pathology, business and a variety of programs in the applied health, life, physical and social sciences. The remainder were admitted to doctoral programs, predominantly in the applied sciences, and to professional schools in medicine and law. (See <http://careers.geneseo.edu>)

SUNY College at Brockport:

(Wednesday, October 24, 10:30 am – 1:00 pm)

Historically, more than 25% of each graduating class of approximately 2000 attends graduate school within the first three years following commencement. SUNY Brockport is a public comprehensive college that offers a distinctive education combining the liberal arts and professional preparation with baccalaureate degrees in 40 undergraduate majors and 18 teacher certification areas. Alumni primarily seek out programs in business, communications, fine and performing arts, the social and natural sciences, applied health, and education. Other areas of interest include international studies, social work, physical therapy, speech pathology, public administration, higher education, and medical and law schools. (See www.brockport.edu)

St. John Fisher College:

(Wednesday, October 24, 3:00 – 5:00 pm)

Last year, 21% of Fisher's graduating seniors attended graduate school in the fall semester following commencement, with an additional 31% planning to enroll within three years. Fisher graduates students in accounting, communication/journalism, computer science, education, management, nursing, psychology, the sciences, sports management, and the liberal arts. Pre-professional programs are offered in dentistry, engineering, environmental science, law, medicine, optometry, pharmacy, podiatry, pre-chiropractic, and veterinary medicine. All students complete a solid core of liberal arts courses, including pluralism and diversity components, in addition to the requirement of their majors, to ensure that Fisher graduates are prepared to succeed in a multicultural society.
